

After delayed start, federal student aid applications are lagging in Florida

As of March 22, submission rates among Florida public high school seniors were down 33% from last year. The revamped application was launched on Dec. 31, three months later than prior years. The delayed start and rocky rollout may be behind the drop, experts said.

45% of seniors

